Titancraft in Photos

by melodioustear

This month, all eyes have been on the Above - an incredible feat of effort and creativity made over more years than this humble photojournalist has even been playing Minecraft. Titancraft welcomed in the whole ZITS crew on opening day, who played (and perished to) the various games and challenges of the lands Above to much hilarity. Whilst there are so many pictures from that day that could capture the joy and celebration, this sums it up for me - our illustrious Bossman overlooking the people who brought his initial creation of many years back to new and wonderful life.

[Tango, a white haired Minecraft character with red eyes and a gothic outfit, stands on top of a tree and looks downwards. Behind him, builds from the Shopping District can be seen, including a giant Caable and a distant castle with birds silhouetted against a cloudy sky.]

This is a huge testament to the creativity of our wonderful staff and mods (both now and through the years). What these pictures can't capture, though, is how wonderful it's been to see Titans working together - whether it's to take down bosses, uncover secrets, or share information with one another.

[A wide landscape shot of the Above, taken from a mountainous spruce region and looking towards the centre village. It is the golden hour, and everything is dappled in misty golden light. The spikes of the mesa and tall palm trees of other islands can be seen in the distance.]

[A picture of the buildings below skeet shooting on the mesa island of the Above. It is a multi-layered building made of colourful cuboid buildings, with lots of tan and red and cream, decorated with plants and other details of a lived in space. Behind it, the sun is setting, casting golden light over everything.]

Lastly in this month's column, I want to turn from the huge and grand to the smaller, but no less beautiful. This month, we're visiting two builds - the first a humble shop by the lovely CptCuddlefish. Many of us think of shops as functional thing, but Cuddles proves here that they can still be a great opportunity to stretch that creativity. Glass is used to create a greenhouse-like effect, and detailed with a variety of woods to create a whimsical but cozy look.

[Cpt Cuddlefish's shop in the shopping district. It is a building with a tall roof of purple and magenta glass, and a dormer with a circular window inside made of extended pistons. Jungle wood forms the shell of the building, and is decorated with mud of varying kinds, spruce and oak details, and pops of mangrove. It is set in front of a blue and purple sky with wispy pink clouds.]

Last but by no means least, we have these hot air balloons by HonestBasil13. In this build, Basil shows us how colour and texture can create enough variations on a theme to create a coherent whole. I particularly loved the combination of aged copper alongside resin, the teal and orange going well together for this striking fleet. At night they are illuminated by the sea lanterns at their core and the glint of gilded blackstone.

[Hovering at different heights are a collection of hot air balloons made from various blocks. They are floating in front of the setting sun amidst pale gold clouds. Each is made of a small basket of trapdoors, with chains stretching up to a sea lantern that is surrounded by blocks of different colours - polished diorite and aged copper, bamboo planks and resin bricks, creating a colourful attraction in the sky.]

That's it from your resident photojournalist for this month! Remember, if you would like your build to be featured in the next photo column, you can contact me on Discord @melodioustear.

Welcome to this issue's puzzle! I was going to go with best ways to blow up your neighbors base, but there was a lot of head shaking and I was struck by 6 or 7 rolled up newspapers. Not a Rusty Report, mind you. We don't print yet. Having contract negotiations trying to get Aflac to stand on street corners like our own little newsie. Anyways, click HERE to play!

Sounds of the Freshers' Unsavory Social Club

by WillowSings

Ever wondered what the Freshers are listening to while building questionable structures, committing entirely consensual murder, or attending perfectly innocent meetings of our Unsavory Social Club? Well, wonder no more! This month, the Freshers were asked to submit seven of their favorite songs to help create the unofficial Freshers Playlist—a musical glimpse into the wildly varied tastes of our little corner of TitanCraft.

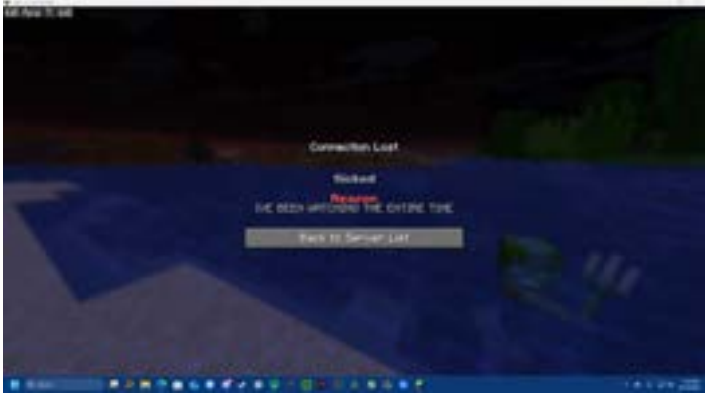

Twelve Freshers answered the call, which means our playlist currently sits at a perfectly reasonable and not-at-all-overwhelming 84 songs. Since printing all 84 would take up a slightly alarming amount of newsletter real estate, we've narrowed things down to two songs from each Fresher for a 24-song sampler. From absolute bangers to unexpected favorites and songs that may make you look at certain Freshers a little differently, consider this the official soundtrack of the Unsavory Social Club.

Stream Weekends Return to Titancraft!

by LadyKB

It's hard to believe that we are (at the time of publication) four months into Season 11 and summer is almost over! When the season started in May, we had a large influx of new members joining along with the return of just as many seasoned veterans to the server. With all of them, however, also came the slow realization of how many people on the server are streamers! That was when one of our newest staff members, Grimbirb, reached out to some of us for a monumental task. The plan, bring back Stream Weekends.

That's right everyone, you read it here! Stream Weekends have finally returned to Titancraft after a hiatus that lasted two seasons!

June 27-28 was the inaugural weekend for Season 11. Our fearless leader, Grimbirb, helmed the chaos that soon ensued. The torch that weekend was a custom-made nugget that was attached to a resource pack for it to be visible. We saw base buildings, perimeter blasting, murder (arena), and the erection of the Stream Weekend Museum. Participants were also tasked with writing an innocent story about two little birds. This soon went off the rails by page four. And you, dear readers, have three guesses by whom. By the end, it was agreed that the weekend was a success and soon plans for the next month were underway.

PillarofNothing started July 25-26 weekend & dedicated it to a theme of "Christmas in July." Streamers were tasked with placing Christmas decorations in a shulker and summarizing what was done on stream. An additional challenge was issued for our participants. Keeping the stream torch (shulker) on their hotbar. Players got up to many interesting shenanigans this weekend but mostly building which the torch hindered the builders' style of utilizing every slot in the hotbar. The highlight, though, was the server tour lead by Cuddles & Aeth. I know Tango will be massively impressed with everything that is to come by the end of the season tour.

August 21-23 saw the weekends adding Fridays to the roster. LadyKB chose to honor childhood memories of summer nights of firefly catching and star wishing for the theme. With a wishing (nether) star in hand, players wrote their wishes in a book with subsequent players writing how they would grant them. Streams were dedicated to Above Adventures, the Summer District Tour, and a fashion show/contest! The final wish of the book was by Flubs who wanted the viewers to have a great rest of the month & hoped they enjoyed the weekend.

September is fast approaching and signups are already underway. Sept 18-20 will be when it is happening. Cuddles has already mentioned a special event occurring during this time so be on the look-out for any forthcoming announcements! Those interested in partaking in the weekend, please reach out so we can help get you on the schedule.

A hearty thank-you goes out to all the people who have participated previously. May we continue to keep doing these weekends going strong.

Beta Testing Madness

by be_loved

It was one of my greatest pleasures to be asked to help the Mods/Staff beta test the Above 2.0 prior to releasing it to the server. The 3 weeks of testing led to some hilarious moments for me in the above. I'm not authorized to reveal any "secrets" but I will let you in on some of the random derpy be_ moments.

First comes my experimentation with horses. Now, as a bug finder and beta tester, it was my job to make sure that we could account for all the shenanigans that Titans might get up to before releasing it to you. I spent quite some time riding horses in and out of various perilous scenarios. One of them included accidentally getting swept up a waterfall in the desert caves and being forced to find a creative way to get him back down (I chose violence).

There was also an incident with an abandoned horse who refused to move. Luckily, I had the patience that no others possessed and awkwardly "jumped" him back to the safety of a stable. This not only looked hilarious but also was doubly funny because I had zero idea of where the nearest stable was. Thanks to Mirabela for guiding me in the correct direction while also snapping pictures.

We all know by now that my happy place is with the bunnies. Ahem, the Killer Bunnies. I helped a bit with recalibrating various aspects of bunny runs. Maybe you have noticed, but we can no longer breed bunnies while running (which I discovered that you could do by accident last season). I popped many a totem and even died (gasp!) once or twice while helping. Bunnies was definitely the first place I headed after landing on the ground in the Above 2.0 for the first time.

In all, along with the shenanigans, the team of beta testers helped find 12 critical bugs, 95 non-critical bugs, and 43 enhancements and feature tweaks. Anita single handedly reported over 70 2-block holes that you now don't have to be rescued from. I'm so glad that the whole server is now the beta testing team - keeping all of this a secret was painful! Hats off to the mods and staff who have put in so much time and energy into making the Above 2.0. And love to Ælfy, who is always in our hearts and is forever memorialized in the above.

Zalvy's Poetry Corner

Twinkle, twinkle, ye lantern,
oh I wonder where I've been.
Up above you show the path,
like a guide between the mines.
Twinkle, twinkle, ye lantern,
now I know just where to turn.
 2.
There once was a lad from TC,
who found a strange rock undersea.
He touched it! Oh ney!
And it whisked him away,
to a place he got stung by a bee.
 3.
Who rides so late through seas and peaks,
it's the player with his loyal steed.
He'd grab the reigns if they'd exist,
he keeps him safe for he cares for those deposits.
- "Player, player, do you not see?
How these evil berry bushes hurt me?"
"Calm, be calm, my steed.
Golden Carrots is all you need."
- The player shudders, as carrots dwindle.
The stable right ahead, just down the middle.
Yet there is no shard to claim,
he has to ring the bell of shame.
