And the Award goes to...

TC S10 Stat Superlatives

by 1yottabyte

Some of Season 10's most dedicated players.

AFK Artisan - IcyQuasar - 226+ Days Play Time
Mastered the ancient art of appearing productive while standing perfectly still for concerning amounts of time.

Geological Menace - basvw9 - 4,012,153 Stone Mined
Mined enough stone to make villagers file environmental complaints.

Crater Creator - Ashlend87 - 1,403,587 Deepslate Mined
Someone should probably check on their sanity after digging THIS much Deepslate.

Frequent Flyers - EvadeandCounter & 1yottabyte 21474.8365 km (MAX)
These two spent so much time airborne they both hit the flight distance cap. Air traffic control has been notified.
Vertical Enthusiast - RaynMan35 - 158.3 km
An incredible commitment to climbing upward for unreasonable amounts of time.
Serial Respawner - TheFlowerMaria - 1136 Deaths
Proved that dying is temporary, but commitment is forever. These deaths were spent completing a parkour game.

Certified Menace - Coccolithiphor - 334 Player Kills
Approached every player interaction as a potential duel. Or it was another mini game!

Gold Farm Industrialist - dWb_2023 - 9,000,000 Zombie Piglin Kills
Produced numbers so high they started looking less like gameplay and more like factory output. This was 39% of ALL mob kills on the server for the whole season.

Immortality Subscription Service - 1yottabyte - 443 Totems Used
Responsible for a server-wide shortage of Totems of Undying.

The Flex Award - Lorondy - 3,624 Diamond Blocks Crafted
Could have stored diamonds normally. Chose visible excess instead.

The Dock Dweller - FictionalXCI - 12,327 Times Fishing
If they weren't building or mining, they were probably fishing somewhere in silence.

Hop Till You Drop - Marsmellow17 - 1,955,688 Jumps
Could frequently be seen aggressively hopping across the server for no apparent reason.

Long Live the Sand Queen - Elleliteration - 5,190,143 Sand Mined
Singlehandedly responsible for 21% of the the sand on the server

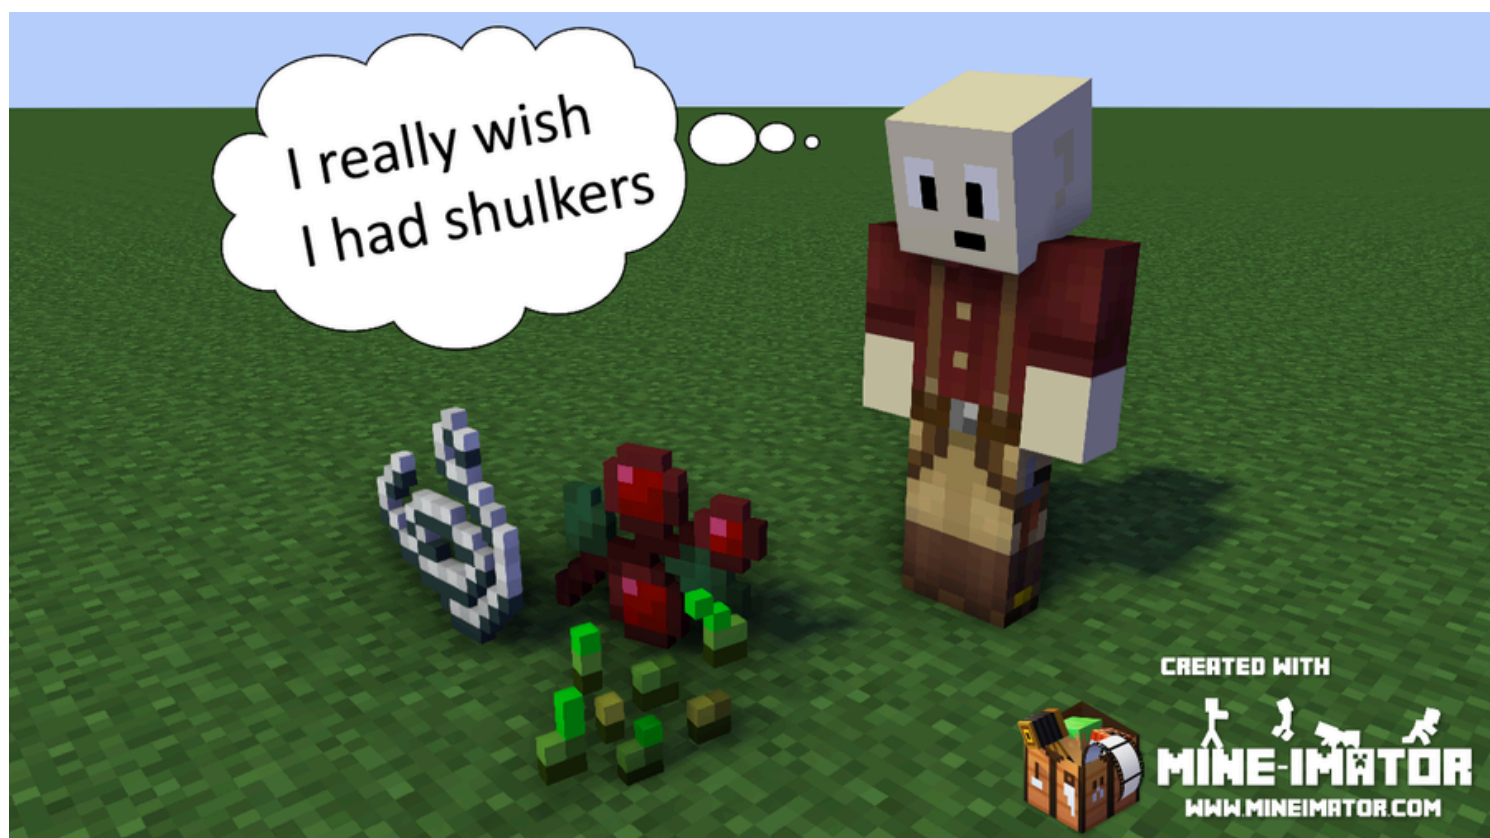

Now that we are past it, I gotta say that I really cannot stand the early game of Minecraft. And I think you do too.

Maybe it's a symptom of the multi-player combo of competition and jealousy that gets us all there, but most everyone is in a mad dash to get as far away from punching trees as fast as possible. [ACQUIRE HARDWARE] [DIAMONDS!] [SPOOKY SCARY SKELETON] Advancements scrolling by at breakneck speeds. We're speedrunning! Before the weekend is up, most are carrying fully enchanted tools and dining on a steady supply of Pork Chops and Golden Carrots.

I think what we really like about this part of the game is simply a collective fresh start with a new canvas. The mystery of what spawn will look like and where in this new world will I call home? Oh, man, I've been cooking on this idea for months. I cannot wait to get started with it.

But then there is the starting. Everything you need is scarce. You have to boat and romp a thousand blocks away to get some of the initial materials. Sit and slowly hack your way against deepslate walls in the hopes of finding some diamond ore you can gather with your fortuneless iron pick.

The inventory starts to take its toll. Okay, this bundle will stave me off until I can find somewhere to place some chests. Eventually you get concerned that you've been wandering for six hours and still have yet to find that flower forest with a ravine you were hoping for. Eventually someone else alerts you to something close enough to that flowery pit you were hoping for that you immediately make a b-line to the opposite corner of the world to lay claim. You arrive with a jam packed inventory and sporting random enchanted leather gear you found on the way looking like the most powerful hobo in the quadrant and say, yeah, I can make this work. You roll up your sleeves and settle in for the slog.

Eventually the niceties are won back. The end opens. We gain flight and shulkers. Enough grunt work has been done that the shops start to emerge to get you the things you had not yet had time to get for yourself. You can realistically make some kind of real start on your season's projects. Ah, there we go. That is exactly what I was looking for. Comfort. Now I can get to the part I love. Creating.

EXPOSEE:

Just who is behind the Banner Syndicate?

by lamFaron

What happens when the weight of a banner empire becomes too much for one man to bear? If recent reports from the Banhattan Police Department are to be believed, something much more dangerous rises up from the ashes, right here in the dark underbelly of Banhattan.

It appears the bustling commercial district outside of SD North hides a sinister secret- a clandestine cabal caught in a convoluted ring of smuggling, producing, and laundering valuable textiles. The report suggests that the Banner Syndicate has long been deeply entrenched in the economic ongoing of Banhattan, allegedly using several storefronts to move their own product. We interviewed Mr. Luzon, the owner of a local hardware store, who denied any knowledge of the supposed syndicate.

“Why, these folks have been doin’ upstanding business here in Banhattan ‘long as it’s been around,” Luzon commented. “My business wouldn’t still be standin’ without their support. Any of this untoward chicanery you’re suggestin’, I won’t hear none of it.” Our reporter was subsequently asked to leave the premises, but was gifted a lovely calendar-of-the month on the way out.

Recovered security footage of suspected Banner Syndicate members and known associates outside of an Ancient City. Source: Anonymous.

Farther away from the city core, however, eyewitnesses tell a different story. Durk the Warden, a recently widowed resident of an ancient city, claims to have encountered the suspects in his very home.

“Ach, they came in like the wind!”, Durk told our reporter. “Breaking our shriekers, taking our wool, for what nefarious purposes I can only imagine. They just kept... snapping their fingers rhythmically as they approached. My husband, he- he fended them all off as long as he could, but they just kept coming. There was nothing he could do.” Durk’s husband, Tom the Warden, tragically passed away in the ensuing skirmish after taking down syndicate members a total of 96 times. His death is currently under investigation by the Banhattan Police Department.

With the upcoming re-opening of the famous Banhattan Gallery, one must wonder what the future holds for the district. Will we uncover the fate of the bountiful wool stashes allegedly pilfered from Tom and Durk’s home? Could even upstanding businesses like the Greathorn Printing Press, the Stonewall Inn, and A.Z. Fell and co, be involved in this sinister scheme? Could the polyester grip of the Banner Syndicate extend even to the beloved art institution as its doors open up to the public?

Whatever comes next, you’ll find all the latest news right here. In the meantime, we assure you the BPD is keeping the vibrant shops of Banhattan perfectly safe to come visit.

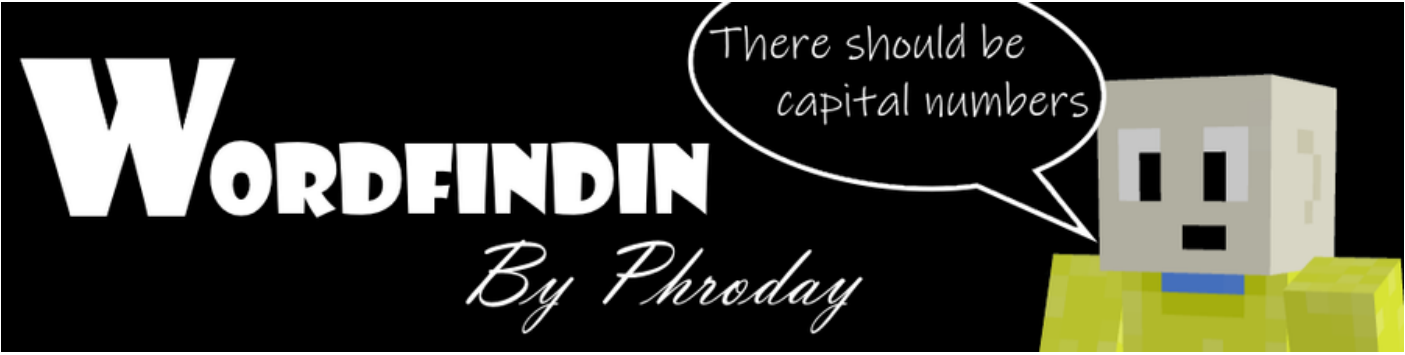

For now, this is Herald Saltire from the Global Golem, writing for Rusty's Report. Take care out there.

Today I bring you another puzzle that I am totally not ripping off from NYT Strands. It's a simple word search where you connect letters in any direction to form a word. All the words are related to the theme and one of those words is the answer to what links the other 7 words.
Play here using your mind or there's an interactive version HERE

From the Desk of the Mods...

From Limbrogger:

New Season, New Features!

As many of you have likely noticed, the Staff has added a new Titancraft Info menu to your pause screen. This menu can also be accessed by clicking on the sign at Spawn or by pressing the Quick Actions key which defaults to 'G' but can be easily changed in the settings menu.

This menu gives players easy access to the server rules and FAQ in-game along with a server orientation aimed at new players, links to important pages on the new Titancraft website and the bug report/suggestion box, and dynamic settings for your player locator bar. We are also planning to add a menu to help explain how all the different coupons work, so keep an eye out!

From Grimbirb:

Dear Titans,

I hope you've all enjoyed the new look for the website.

With the new website now live, please don't hesitate to provide any feedback and suggestions to the staff.

In addition, if you wish to have your Titancraft projects shown off as a background for the site, feel free to DM me on Discord.

Here's to a great season start, with many more adaptations and love! ♥

From Zalvy:

Ode to the Savior

A server in distress

It was in the middle of a cold dark night (or a pretty hot one if you live in Phoenix I suppose), whence a server fell asleep and missed its wake-up call. Its caretakers had just finished dedicating long hours to its care and had earned their fair slumber, so they knew not, of the following blunder.

As the Eastern crowd arose and happily tried to start their day mining and crafting they exclaimed, "OH NO" when they discovered, there was a server no more. Hours passed, the bells rang, once, twice, but to no avail.

Then arose the knight in shining vampire cloak, riding his skeletal steed "Adequate", the hooves approaching from afar with a reassuring sound: "dungadungadungadunga". He came to the rescue, glanced upon the server and declared heroically: "Yeah, I have no idea how to fix this". ... and then he fixed it anyway!

And so ends the tale of our heroic vampire. The caretakers awoke, still not quite rested, they rejoiced at the hero's feat and they resumed their watch over the server.

What Did I Just Read

by be_loved

What did I just read?

Why, it's the wonderful Titancraft Newsletter, Rusty's Report! This is a monthly newsletter written by Titans for Titans and then wrangled together by yours truly.

What makes Rusty's Report so wonderful?

Well, that's easy, YOU make it wonderful, silly.

Me? How do I do that?

You provide ideas, articles, pictures, classified ads – almost anything! I'm here to guide you (if you need it) and to generally solicit articles and toss them all together to make this shining publication.

Can I really write about ANYTHING?

Yes! Past issues have included how to guides on interior decorating in Minecraft, roving reports of community events as well as things like one Titan's trip to a Capybara Spa. Generally, we try to steer towards Titancraft specific content, but I'm open to anything and the staff/mods gave me COMPLETE creative control! Exciting, right?!?!

So, how do I know when articles are due and such?

Pretty simple, the newsletter is published on the last day of every month. Usually, I post in the newsletter thread in Discord with the date that I would like all articles submitted to me and then you write something and DM me (be_loved) on Discord with what you have written. Definitely include pictures, because those always make it more interesting to read!

Do I have to write an article EVERY month?

Nope. You can write just one article and never again, or you can write a recurring column – I'm open to anything!

What if English is not my native language?

No problemo! I'm here to do any editing of your article to put the polish on it and the mods/staff review everything to catch what I miss.

I have more questions...

Feel free to DM me or post in the newsletter thread in Discord!

If you are new – welcome to Titancraft! And if you aren't, it's great to see you again, friend!

welcome!
